The day begins early with a transfer to the sacred Yen Tu Mountain, a site where the spiritual legacy of King Tran Nhan Tong resonates through the forests and peaks. At 08:30, your first stop is Yen Tu Village, a serene hamlet nestled along the Giai Oan Stream. This recreated ancient village evokes the 13th century, when concubines of the Tran Dynasty followed Emperor Tran Nhan Tong here, remaining at the mountain's base as he ascended for spiritual practice. Today, the village embodies the essence of a traditional Northern settlement, offering boutique accommodations, authentic cuisine, and cultural experiences like craft workshops. At 08:45, your ascent begins with the Hoang Long Cable Car, a French-made system offering 360-degree views. Its cabins glide smoothly above lush forests, wildflowers, and seasonal foliage, providing a breathtaking aerial perspective of the Yen Tu range.

By 09:15, you will arrive at the Hue Quang Stupa Garden, the spiritual core of Yen Tu. Here stand memorial stupas of Zen masters from various dynasties, with the Golden Stupa of King-Monk Tran Nhan Tong at its heart. Built in 1309, this stupa enshrines a relic and statue of the great monk, with its base from the Tran era and a restored structure from the Le dynasty. Inside, a bronze statue is recognized as a National Treasure of Vietnam. From 10:15 to 10:30, you reach Hoa Yen Pagoda, situated 535 meters above sea level. Initially constructed during the Ly Dynasty, this main pagoda of the Yen Tu complex became the practice site for many Zen masters, including Tran Nhan Tong, the First Patriarch of the Truc Lam Zen School. Between 10:30 and 10:45, the journey continues to Mot Mai Pagoda, or One-Roof Pagoda, a unique sanctuary clinging to the mountainside with only half its roof. Originally a cave, it served as a meditative retreat where King Tran Nhan Tong studied and wrote scriptures. The pagoda houses sacred relics such as a marble altar and a stone incense burner carved in 1853 with Buddhist mantras. At 10:45, a second aerial tram, the Bach Long Cable Car, transports you 900 meters closer to the Dong Pagoda. Floating through clouds above Yen Tu National Forest, the ride offers an ethereal sense of approaching heaven's gate. By 11:00, you pause at An Ky Sinh, a natural formation linked to the legend of a Taoist sage who sought immortality here in the 3rd century BC. At 11:15, the pilgrimage culminates at the Bronze Statue of Tran Nhan Tong, a monumental statue inaugurated in 2013, honoring his profound role in shaping Vietnamese Buddhism.

From 12:00 to 13:30, you will descend the mountain to enjoy lunch at Com Que - Lang Nuong Yen Tu, a rustic restaurant serving regional flavors. The afternoon is then free for relaxation at your own pace. In the evening, between 16:00 and 18:00, you will participate in the Six Sense Repentance Ceremony at Truc Lam Zen Monastery.
